Areas to be covered

With the increase in global business transactions and the mobility of persons across national boundaries, the need for an effective method to enable a civil judgment given in one country to be enforced in another country is becoming more important. The increase in cross-border litigation and business efficacy demands predictability in enforcement of claims against their debtors in foreign countries.

The talk will cover areas including:

- the mechanisms for recognition and enforcement of foreign judgments
- an outline of the Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgment Act 1958 ("REJA")
- issues in recognizing and enforcing foreign judgments
- recent developments
